Overview

The Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act requires financial institutions such as banks & savings associations, credit unions, mortgage & trust companies, insurance companies, collection agencies and others to disclose privacy policies, limit instances in which consumer information can be shared with non-affiliated third parties and provide consumers an opportunity to protect some of their personal financial information from being shared. The Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council (FFIEC) has introduced a privacy regulation implementing the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act which imposes certain requirements on its member institutions. This product covers various technicalities of privacy regulation giving relevant and convincing examples..
